Course Description

This seminar explores the intersection of culture, rights and law in order to better understand the ways that law shapes our society, communities and values, and vice versa. Students will debate and assess selected topics that are currently of great social, political, economic and legal concern from the perspective of various disciplines spanning the social sciences and humanities.

Course Objectives

This is a senior seminar, so the first objective is to encourage students to take ownership of the course. Other than a few opening remarks and guiding questions from the course instructor, the students themselves are responsible for setting the tone and tempo of the in-class/ online seminar experience. The second objective, related to the first, is to foster an environment of respectful and knowledgeable critique and engagement, which is essential to effective scholarly debate. This means that students must be exceptionally well-prepared on a weekly basis to not only answer, but also ask pointed questions that demonstrate your critical reading and thinking skills.

Required Texts

All readings listed in this outline can be accessed through the Library Course Reserves. All other supplementary readings are available through the UW Library Database.

There are two (2) key articles required as readings for each seminar week. Supplementary readings, provided through a separate list, are meant to be cross-referenced for seminars and research purposes. More details in seminar.

Assessment Breakdown

15% Seminar Participation:

Students are expected to engage with each seminar having completed the readings. Each seminar, each and every student is to post a question, by each Monday morning 10am, related to that week's readings on the Discussion Board on LEARN for the seminar week. At the beginning of each week, the instructor will ensure that all questions have been added. Each added 'Hat' question is one point contribution to your overall participation grade (9 weeks = 9 points, 9% out of 15%). The questions will spark discussion and are meant to raise any issues with unclear concepts or confusion from the readings, or anything that may be controversial, or of particular interest. In addition to the weekly Hat question, participation will be assessed based on the quality and content of your weekly question as well as your responses and participation in discussions, commenting and engaging with, each week's presentations and seminar content. Make-up questions will not be permitted. You must stay on top of the material from week to week.

25% Seminar Leadership:

In the first class, students will sign up to present the readings for one week. Students will work together in pairs to present the two articles for their designated week. The aim is for the seminar leaders to summarize the readings, describing each author's key theoretical and methodological approach(es) (we will discuss how to do this in class), and trace how the authors build their arguments. Handouts may be used/ provided for the seminar participants. The seminar leaders will be required to relate the readings to the other readings and/or current events, previous seminar discussions and overall themes of the course, as well as to relevant 'real-life' events (past or present). Feel free to research beyond the two articles, using the supplementary reading list as a guide or starting point.

Seminar leaders are asked to critically discuss the articles, to engage deeply with the themes, identifying both how the author contributed to discussion in the field and some limitations of the author's contribution. The seminar leaders will be asked to conclude their presentation by identifying two or three questions for discussion that arise from the readings.

The seminar leaders will then lead the class in a discussion of these questions, incorporating questions from the Hat. The discussion should be inclusive and well facilitated, encouraging contributions from all seminar participants. Discussions aim to be both an in-depth discussion of the texts and a creative process of linking the texts to other texts, ideas, and 'real-life' events.

You, in pairs, can decide how to divide the preparation and the presentation time amongst themselves, but each student's presentation should include analysis as outlined above (not just description), and each student should speak for not more than 15 minutes in total (not including facilitating the discussion after). Each student's mark will be assigned by the professor based on their own part of the presentation and on the overall performance of their seminar.

20% Essay Plan with Annotated Bibliography:

Students will write a two-paged outline of their proposed final research paper that includes a summary of their proposed argument, how they will go about building this argument, how their argument will relate to existing research and to broader debates in the course, and why their topic is important. The outline should be written in full sentences (avoid point form), like the first pages of a research paper.

Essay topics will be discussed in advance during seminars – which is why attendance to all seminars is crucial – and must be aligned with at least one of the seminar themes/topics: Law, Canadian Immigration Law, Immigration Law Internationally, Precarious Work and Rights, Labour and Employment Law, Canadian Law and Indigeneity, Indigenous Law and Decoloniality, Thinking Law Alternatively. The Supplementary Reading List and the authors listed in the seminar reading lists are meant to be a good starting point for research and research topics.

Students will submit their outline along with a single-spaced annotated bibliography of at least five academic sources they have examined so far for their research paper. The bibliography should include full bibliographic information for each source followed by a short paragraph briefly summarizing that source, its relation to the proposed research topic and the debates therein, and what it will contribute to the research paper. No more than one of the five sources can come from the seminar readings (supplementary list excluded).

Once the essay plans and annotated bibliographies are assessed, students may at that point make an appointment to speak with me in more detail about their plan and ask for any clarification on feedback.

40% Final Essay:

This essay will be due on the last day of the course and should be no more than 10-12 pages double spaced, Times New Roman 12-pnt font, not including title page and references/bibliography.

The essay is meant to be an accumulation of materials and topics covered in the course but must be based primarily on external research. More details will follow in seminar, and a supplementary course readings list will be provided on LEARN to help kick-start research.

Submission and Return of Assignments

Submit electronic copies of all essays via the Drop Box on LEARN. Essays will be automatically time-stamped to indicate on-time submission. Essays will be graded within two weeks of the date of submission; essay comments and grades will be posted on LEARN.

Late Assignments

Any assignment submitted after the date and time that it is due will be subjected to a 5% per day late penalty. For example, if you submit a paper that is assessed at 85%, it will fall to 80% if you submit it late by one day, 75% for two days, and 70% for three (and so on). Your assignment will not be accepted if it is more than 7 days late. The following policies also apply if you think that you will not be able to carry-out your responsibilities as a seminar leader on the date you selected at the beginning of the term.

Accommodations will only be considered if:

- (a) you are ill and submit a University of Waterloo Verification of Illness Form to the course instructor as soon as possible;
- (b) there was a death of a family member, which you can prove through official documentation

(travel receipts will not suffice) submitted to the course instructor;

- (c) due dates conflict with important dates on your religious calendar, and you have informed the course instructor of this fact;
- (d) you are registered with AccessAbility Services and can provide the course instructor with the relevant documentation.

Do familiarize yourself with the University of Waterloo's policies on what your responsibilities are in the event of a late or missed course requirement: https://uwaterloo.ca/registrar/finalexaminations/examination-regulations-and-related-matters#acc illness

Keep in mind the following regulations:

Students in on-campus courses who are ill and unable to meet assignment due dates or write a term test or final examination should seek medical treatment and provide confirmation of the illness to the instructor(s) within 48 hours by submitting a completed University of Waterloo Verification of Illness Form to support requests for accommodation due to illness. The University of Waterloo Verification of Illness Form is normally the only acceptable medical documentation and is available on line at uwaterloo.ca/health-services/student-medicalclinic/services/verification-illness. Students who consult their physician or use the services of an off-campus walk-in clinic must provide this form to the attending physician for completion; doctors' notes and forms created by the physician or clinic are normally not acceptable.

Attendance and Participation

All students are entitled to one penalty-free missed class for which no documentation is necessary. If a student misses more than one class, official documentation must be provided to the professor as soon as possible that demonstrates the reason for absence. Only official documentation related to (a) death of a family member; (b) illness; (c) AccessAbility; and (d) UW-recognized religious holidays will be considered – for more details on types of documentation, see 'Late and Missed Course Requirements'. If no official documentation is received, the student can expect deductions of 5% per missed class from the overall participation grade.

Electronic Devices

No off-task use of technology is permitted. Any violations will result in deductions to the student's overall participation grade.

Correspondence with Professor

Email is the best way to reach the professor. I will aim to reply to emails within 2 business days (Monday to Friday, 8:30am-4:30pm, holidays exempted).

Re-marking Course Work

Assignments are marked carefully in this course. Re-grades are highly unlikely to result in perceptible changes to your final grade and are strongly discouraged. However, if you feel that the grader has made a serious error in grading your work and you would like to request that the work be re-marked, you must write a detailed memo in which you identify the questions or portions of the assignment or test that you believe were marked incorrectly and why you think the marking was incorrect. Please note that the effort you put into the assignment and your future plans (needing high grades for law school, etc.) are not valid reasons for requesting a re-grade. Submit the memo to the professor during office hours together with the marked test or assignment. The professor will pass it on to the TA who graded it to be re-marked. Work will not be re-marked without a written request. The deadline for requesting a re-marking is two weeks from the date the course work was handed back in class. If the work was re-marked by the TA and you feel it is necessary to appeal the outcome, you may submit it to the professor during office hours with your original memo and the TA's written response. Attach a note stating that you wish to request a second re-marking and why. The deadline for this request is two weeks from the date the first re-mark was made available for pick-up. Tests written in pencil will not be considered for re-marking.

Please note that the TA or professor will re-mark the entire test or assignment, not simply the questions or portion you believe were scored improperly. The re-grader may discover errors that were not detected in the first marking of the assignment or test. As a result, it is possible that your revised mark will go down, rather than going up or staying the same. The revised mark will stand.
